INTELLIGENCE NOTE: ANALYSIS OF SOVIET NOTE ON GRIMANY

Purposes of Note. Moscow's August 3 note is designed to serve two purposes; (1) to bring the West into 4- or 6-power talks on Soviet terms;
(2) to win support from the uncommitted countries. It does this by standing firm on the separate treaty threat and by effering a little in beit for negotiations. It is both e low-key polemic against the WS note and an effective presentation of the Soviet position.

Beit for Telks. The note is more positive on the need for negotiations. But it still stops short of offering a 4- or 6-power conference, evidently, to svoid any sign of weakness. The June 4 Soviet memo called only for a peace conference and made only elliptical silusions to a negotiating conference. This note does not mention a peace conference. Instead it empresses Soviet readiness to take part in discussions, with a peace treaty as their real (by implication the discussions would be a 4-power summit conference).

In addition, the note repeatedly cites, as a potential agenda formula, the "question of a posseful settlement with Germany" -- a formula loose enough to accommodate the positions of both sides. Finally, the note, while repeating the separate treaty threst, does not mention a desdime.

More Rigid on Terms of Settlement. The note suggests that the WS should set forther the terms it thinks "should be reflected in a peace treaty." Except for this it makes no offer to consider anything but the Soviet peace treaty and "free-city" and "free city" proposals. In centrast, the June 4 memorandum expressed readiness to examine "any constructive proposals" on a German treaty and "mormalization" of West Berlin and suggested there might be alternatives to the "free city proposals".

I em sending seperately an analysis of a portion of the mote indicating a possible shift on the Soviet approach on Berlin.
